THE SELFISH PRINCESS

A long time ago, in a far-away land, there lived a beautiful little Princess, whose home was a large castle overlooking the village. Alicia—for that was her name—lived in great wealth and luxury, and anything her heart desired the King gave to her. For that reason, she was a most spoiled little Princess, and very selfish.

Each day when Alicia took her walk through the village she passed a tiny cafe. The owner was a poor man, and his little daughter sold matches to the few customers who passed in and out of the door. Each time Alicia walked by the ragged little Match Girl, she would wrap her expensive cloak about her, and haughtily lift her nose in the air. As we said, she was a most spoiled little Princess.

One afternoon, while taking her daily stroll, Alicia noticed that the Match Girl was not in her usual place by the cafe. Suddenly she heard a most wonderful melody coming from behind the patched and broken door. Unable to resist the haunting strains, she tip-toed to the window and peeked inside. There, seated at a battered old piano, was the little Match Girl, and the songs that leapt from her fingers made the Princess want to dance, with joy and weep with sadness—so beautiful was the sound of them.

"Gracious!" said Alicia to herself. "If a poor, raggedy Match Girl can make such lovely tunes on a broken-down piano like that, imagine what gorgeous songs a rich, beautiful Princess like myself could make on my Solid Gold one!" And hardly able to contain herself with excitement, she ran all the way back to the castle, and fairly burst through the doors of the Royal Music Room. And sure enough, standing there was a piano of SOLID GOLD! . . . Well, actually not SOLID gold, for the strings were woven of finely spun silver, and the keyboard was of onyx and pearls.

Breathlessly she sat down to the precious instrument and started to play. But the sounds which emerged were a jumble of noises; Loud, discordant and unpleasant to the ear. Not at all like the wonderful tunes she had heard the little Match Girl make. In a rage of anger she kicked the piano with all her might. . . And then a truly strange thing happened!

For out of the piano, and onto the Royal Carpet, fell a pair of bright yellow gloves. Filled with curiosity, the little Princess tried them on. Oddly enough, they fit her perfectly! And then, even more oddly, her hands began to play upon the piano of their own accord. And oh, such music came from them! Glorious, magnificent songs raced from her fingers across the sparkling keyboard. Even more lovely than the melodies the little Match Girl had played. "Why these must be Magic Gloves!" Alicia laughed delightedly, as her hands rippled out tune after tune, each more beautiful and melancholy than the next.

After a while the Princess became tired and wished to stop. But alas, she could not! The harder she tried, the more furiously the Magic Gloves pulled her fingers up and down the keyboard, playing melody after melody without a stop. Alicia became frightened and began to cry. She tried to snatch off the yellow gloves, but to no avail. On and on and on they played, till her head ached, her arms were weary, and her little fingers were swollen with pain. But still the Magic Gloves continued playing.

At last she sobbed, "I had everything in the world, and that poor little Match Girl had nothing—except the gift of making wonderful music! Why did I have to be so selfish as to want the one thing she had? . . . Oh," she sobbed, "If only my hands would stop playing, I vow never to be spoiled or selfish again!"

And no sooner had the words come from her lips, than her fingers suddenly became still, and the yellow gloves slipped from her hands onto the floor. With a joyous shout, Alicia picked them up and hurled them out the castle window, as far as she possibly could.

In the months that followed, people whispered about the remarkable change that had come over the Princess. Where she was once spoiled and selfish, she was now helpful and kind, even giving her toys and dolls to the poor children of the village.

And her Very Best Friend was now the ragged little Match Girl, who every afternoon in her father's cafe, would give lessons to the Princess. . . . Piano Lessons, of course!
